Heady days for Camberley

Rupert Metcalf Friday 06 November 1998

CAMBERLEY TOWN face a derby cup tie tomorrow against a team from just three miles away, with a chance to go all the way to Wembley the prize for the winners.

It may prove difficult, however, for the Camberley players to concentrate on their task, when they take on Cove in the first round of the FA Carlsberg Vase. Seven days later, in the first round of the FA Cup, they have a somewhat tougher task - away to Brentford.

Cove are adrift at the bottom of the Courage Combined Counties League, and should be easy opponents for Camberley, who gained impressive and unexpected away wins at Braintree and then St Blazey in the last two qualifying rounds of the FA Cup. Brentford, joint leaders of the Nationwide League Third Division, will be a different proposition.

"We're using the Cove game as a stepping stone to the Brentford tie," Andy Vaughan, the Ryman League Third Division club's spokesman, said. "We've also got a league game against Corinthian-Casuals on Tuesday, which doesn't help."

It has been a busy week for everyone connected with Camberley since their 2-0 success at St Blazey last Saturday took the Surrey side into the first round of the FA Cup for the first time in their history. "We spent some time recovering from all the alcohol we consumed last weekend in Cornwall," Vaughan said.

"Since then the players have posed for a new team photograph and they've been talking tactics for the Brentford game," Vaughan added. "The manager has banned any talk of the FA Cup tie after Thursday, though, so that they can concentrate on the Cove game."

Camberley's manager is Paul Holden MBE, who earned his honour after several years of service as the coach of the national Army XI and then his contribution to football in Gibraltar when he served in the colony. It will be his task at Cove tomorrow to ensure that his players focus on the competition in which they have a chance of reaching Wembley, rather than dream of fleeting fame the following weekend against Ron Noades' men from Griffin Park.

Past Events

St Blazey- having been drawn away to St Blazey, plans quickly had to be put in place to get everyone to Cornwall, the first time ever the Club had played so far away. St Blazey wanted us to travel there and back on the same day, a quick check of the rules allowed an overnight stay as it was some 200+ miles and around 4 hours away. A new chain of accommodation had just been launched - Travelodge came to the rescue providing enough rooms at a reasonable price, The Coach departed Krooner Parade late afternoon and we arrived just in time for Last orders to be called at 11 (this was 1998) the weather was not good. The home club got the pitch ready and the Referee was happy to proceed, the result a 0-2 win. Sky Sports held the draw for the 1st Round Proper shortly after the game which was broadcast in the St Blazely clubhouse! BRENTFORD FC will play CAMBERLEY TOWN at Griffin park. The Noise and excitement was incredible.

Playing Colours at Brentford- The rules at the time stated that if the home colours of both sides clashed then both sides had to change to alternative choice. Brentford opted for Blue, Our Manager Paul Holden MBE insisted on a new Kit! For our special days and it was to be ALL WHITE! Much to the mutterings of the Treasurer and Kit Manager, unbeknown to all, the order had gone in to the supplier with the collars, cuffs and trim being in red.... A crafty or ingenious way of Playing in our first choice of RED and WHITE

The long wait goes on for Cornwall By Will Buckley Guardian News Paper

And then there were none. Only two Cornish teams entered the FA Cup this year, Falmouth and St Blazey, and neither has made it as far as the first round proper. Before most people are even aware that the competition has started, the Cornish interest in it is over. Just as it has been for the last 30 years.

Yesterday St Blazey, the lowest-ranked team left in the competition, attempted to become the first South-Western league club ever, and the first Cornish club side since Falmouth in 1969, to qualify for a crack at a professional club. They were thwarted by Camberley from the Rymans League Division Three. They, too, had never reached such dizzy heights, despite having been around for more than 100 years. The Surrey club have supplanted St Blazey as the lowliest in the FA Cup.

Yet it might have been different. Early on, Glyn Hooper, the star of St Blazey, appeared to be impeded in the area. Referee Steve Dunn - last week at Anfield handling a game in which Michael Owen scored four, this week at Blaise Park - ignored the appeal. Then there was a chance of a freak own goal. Down at the marshy end of the ground, John Sills slipped the ball past his own keeper only for it to slow in the mud sufficiently for Camberley's Grey to hurry back and claw it away.

Before the game St Blazey's manager, Trevor Mewton, had predicted that Camberley's main threat would come from the big man up front laying it off for the little men around him to score. It is one thing to predict, another to prevent. The ball was lumped up to John Sills' brother, Tim, and he laid it down for Stephen Lloyd to poke it in. Minutes later, Tim Sills doubled his team's tally with a skidding shot from the edge of the area. He did a handstand to celebrate and the eight Camberley fans behind the goal applauded. Suddenly, St Blazey were looking none too brave.

Throughout a long, drab second half they never looked like making an impression on the game. In the snooker room above the home goal the atmosphere was heavy with punctured dreams. The crowd of 590, more than double the number who attended in the last round, watched morosely. In particular it had been a depressing afternoon for Ken Cocks, ex-branch chairman of the postal workers' union in Cornwall, and a life-long fan of St Blazey. He has been assistant, joint secretary, team manager, vice-chairman, chairman and, now, president of the club. In 1971, he was manager of the side on their last big day when they met a Bromsgrove Rovers team containing two ex-England internationals, Peter Broadbent and Mike Hellawell, in the first round of the FA Trophy.

"It's quite a task but we are always in with a chance at St Blazey," said Ken at the time. Two-nil down with five minutes to go they levelled the score and, as it is written in Blaise of Glory - a hundred years of St Blazey AFC, "with a little more injury time might even have got a winner". In the replay, they were 2-0 up before going 3-2 down.

Now, Ken was on the eve of another big day and, together with treasurer and ex-docker Brian Brokenshire, we went on a magical mystery tour through china clay country. First port of call is Andy Waddell. Wads is stocky with a tidy ginger beard and moustache. He works for the council as an HGV driver - anything from skip lorries to ashcarts. He is currently the most prolific scorer in Cornish football - "over two seasons at Falmouth, I scored 101 goals at a ratio of 1.1 per game". He is much in demand and has played for most teams in the Jewson South-Western League: if someone offered #40 rather than #30 a week then Wads is on his way.

Falmouth, incidentally, are the giants of Cornish football. They are the only team from the county to have made it into the first round before, and on all three occasions they faced League opponents - Oxford United (including Big Ron at centre-half) in 1962, Peterborough in 1967 and, two years later, Peterborough again, this time at home in front of 4,000. But this is rugby country. Thirty-thousand will travel to Twickenham to watch Cornwall in the county final. When Waddell represents his county "you're lucky to get a hundred watching you." St Blazey expected, as usual, to be underestimated. "They look at Cornish football. Right down there. And don't rate you at all." Wads, in turn, does not seem to rate himself. He is not sure he will be picked.

He need not worry. In his Newquay shop, Studs Sports, manager Trevor Mewton says he will be picking the team that beat Barking 1-0 in the last round. "You're looking at three people who are football nuts," he says about Ken, Brian and himself. It is impossible to disagree. "If I don't get a buzz, if I put my club tie on and it doesn't mean anything, then it's time to get out." He plays the game down. "For me, whatever happens, the FA Vase assignment against Mangotsfield next Saturday is more important. We can't win the FA Cup, but we can have a run in the Vase." The pre-match routine will be no different from a home game against Holsworthy. Meet at the ground at 2pm, pick team, quick chat, play match. While we sit in a cramped room at Studs Sports, St Blazey AFC receive two pieces of bad news by phone.

First, the ground and safety officer has imposed a crowd limit of 1,700 on St Blaise Park. "There's a problem with the Laundry End as I call it," says Ken. Second, the FA have turned down the club's appeal against Camberley being allowed an overnight stay. This means that the cost of putting up 20 people from Camberley for the night, about #500, will come off the gate before the receipts can be divided up. This is doubly annoying for Ken. For a start, he could have put up his visitors more cheaply in a hotel in out-of-season Newquay and, anyway, they could easily travel down on the morning of the game. Fair enough: Camberley is to the west of London, the roads are better, it need not take more than four hours. More bias against Cornwall is suspected.

As we leave, Trevor's wife appears with the programme. We admire it. The centre piece is a column called Bellicosity by AKA Studs which ends: "The next round will be every bit as tough as the last. Ask yourself: "Do you want it?" " The man also known as Studs is DC Dave Ford from Newquay Special Branch. Deep in darkest china clay country we find him relaxing at home having just done the ironing. He takes a combative view of St Blazey's Cup run. "In the second qualifying round at Pershore for the first 20 minutes it was tin hats and sandbags. Then we took over." The theme continued in the third round against Barking? "The first 10 minutes or so were like the Alamo and we were repelling boarders on all fronts." The police, on the whole, are very good about allowing Dave time off to play football although he did miss a recent game due to an ill-timed robbery. A few years ago a keen chief constable arranged for Devon and Cornwall Police to enter a team in the South Western League in a bid to improve community relations. It failed.

DC Ford is also playing down the big game. He feels it is not quite up there with the police national tournament in 1994 involving inter alia the RUC and the Met, which culminated in Devon and Cornwall defeating West Midlands Police in the final. Perhaps he is right - the West Midlands Police have always been notoriously tricky opponents. The players and manager may be cagey, but as the evening unwinds Ken and Brian become increasingly confident. "Imagine if we win and are drawn away at Man City. Sky would definitely televise it. That would be #75,000 straight away. We're talking silly money," dreams Brian. But it will never happen. Instead Camberley went through, and half an hour after the game Rodney Marsh and George Best, making the draw, rewarded them with a lucrative tie at near neighbours Brentford. It will be their biggest day, and their biggest pay day, since they were formed in 1896.
